S. LANGHORNE BODY CONSIDERS HIGHWAY WIDENING PROBLEM

Withholds Permission for The State to Increase Width
Through Borough

BORO' MAY BE LIABLE

For Any Property Damage
That Might Result; Held
Under Advisement

SOUTH LANGHORNE, May 16.—The possibility of widening of the Lincoln Highway through this borough is a question that is the subject of consideration from many angles just at present.

South Langhorne borough council is holding under advisement the matter of giving permission for such, feeling that it would not be wise to place the borough in position for liability for any property damage that might result.

The subject is being discussed pro and con these days in many local circles.

The matter of widening the highway, which has been placed before the council, involves reconstruction of the thoroughfare to 44 feet, from curb to curb. This proposed plan calls for two stretches of concrete, separated by a lane of amiesite or similar material.

The councilmanic body has expressed itself as feeling that if said borough group does not give permission, the blame for any damage that might result, will fall elsewhere. The council feels that the borough should not carry the burden. It is the belief of the local body that the state has the right to proceed with the project whether local consent is received or not.

The council is also considering the advisability of regulating speeds for vehicles using the Lincoln Highway and Bellevue avenue, frequent menaces being noted.

Ernest Keyser Named To Bristol Group Presidency

EMILIE, May 16.—New officers were named as representatives of 11 of the Leagues in the Bristol Group of Epworth Leagues gathered in the Emilie Methodist Church, last evening, for the May rally.

Ernest Keyser, Lahaska, who has been associate president, advanced to the presidency, succeeding Thomas Chase, who has served the Group so faithfully. Vice-presidents include: 1st, Mrs. Millard Mather, Newtown; 2nd, Miss Alma Harris, Emilie; 4th, Larry Turpin, Bensalem. Named as secretary Miss Ruth Satterfield, Yardley; treasurer, William Lyndall, Bristol. Three offices are yet to be filled, those of third vice president, intermediate and junior superintendents.

The retiring president, Mr. Chase, thanked the Leaguers for their support during his tenure of office, and for their reverent and attentive attitude during the rally programs. He then introduced the new officers, with the new president responding with brief remarks.

A portion of the program was in charge of the second department, which includes missions. William Lyndall, Bristol, who has been serving as second vice-president, asked for eight minute talks on the subject, "My Favorite Missionary Hero or Heroine." Frank Blenkin, Newtown, received a fine ovation for his talk regarding E. Stanley Jones, the famed missionary to India.

Miss Frances Hellyer, Langhorne, read minutes of the last rally; Miss Barbara Heizman, Bensalem, presided at the piano; and Mr. Adams served as chorister, and also pleased with a vocal solo.

The Rev. Carl Hammerly, pastor of Newtown M. E. Church, called attention of the young people to the North District Epworth League Convention to be held in Calvary M. E. Church, Easton, on Saturday, May 23rd. At that time the Yardley League will have charge of the devotional period.

Through courtesy of Elmer K. Esser, Philadelphia, moving pictures of the 1935 Epworth League Institute at Blair Academy, Blairtown, N. J., were shown, some being in colors. The dean of the Pocono Institute for 1935, the Rev. George A. Laughhead, was introduced, and spoke briefly. He informed the Leaguers of the dates of the state, it being from August 10th to 17th. The Rev. Thomas, Yardley, and the Rev. Hammerly, Newtown, were introduced as members of the institute faculty.

Newtown League received the attendance banner for the evening, with a delegation of 65; and Scottsville carried home the percentage banner. Other Leagues represented were: Bensalem, Bristol, Emilie, Hulmeville, Lahaska, Langhorne, Morrisville, Trevoise, Yardley. Total attendance approximately 235.

The July rally will be in the form of a stunt night, and will occur at Bensalem M. E. social hall, on the 17th instant.

EAGLE SCOUT WINS AWARD FOR ESSAY

Great Game of Scouting Points
The Way to World
Peace

GETS CANTOR AWARD

The great game of Scouting points the way to world peace, according to Eagle Scout Owen W. Matthews, 3rd, an able Sea Scout and Divisional Officer of Regional Sea Scout Flagship "Columbia" and member of Troop 83, Portland, Ore. Matthews is the winner of the Eddie Cantor $5,000 scholarship prize essay contest entitled "How Can America Stay Out of War?"

One of 212,000 entries submitted, Matthews' whole approach to his subject is based on his two weeks' experience camping in a foreign country with 30,000 Boy Scouts from 46 different lands plus the friendships with foreign boys in the years that have followed.

The fourth World Scout Jamboree which Matthews attended as one of the 402 Scouts and leaders from the United States was held at Godollo, near Budapest, Hungary. The four judges—Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago; Frederick Bertram Robinson, president, College of the City of New York; Ray Lyman Wilbur, president, Leland Stanford University, and Henry Noble MacCracken, president of Vassar College—based their decision on the quality of "the most constructive, sincere and interesting letters regardless of fancy writing, and technical knowledge."

Matthews, a Veteran Scout, has a Scout record reflecting his leadership qualities. Successively, he served his Troop as Patrol Leader, Senior Patrol Leader, and then Junior Assistant Scoutmaster and he has had extensive experience at Camp Meriwether, the camp of the Portland, Ore., Boy Scouts.

Matthews' winning essay follows: "My idea how America can stay out of war is based on my personal experiences. I am an Eagle Scout and have been in Scouting for seven years. Through Scouting and other worthwhile youth movements is the way this can be accomplished. The spring of 1933 I heard of the coming Fourth International Scout Jamboree held in Godollo, Hungary, and made my plans to attend. I went to the Jamboree and there found my solution for future world peace. While a member of this wonderful Jamboree I learned what true brotherly love meant.

"In Europe wherever we met a person in the Scout Uniform we knew he was our loyal friend and brother. Although unable to converse with some foreign Scouts, their actions always bespoke friendships. All boys at the Jamboree wanted to be friends and we made new ones every day. By actually living for two weeks with thirty thousand foreign Scouts we learned that they thought and acted just as we did, even though their color and creed might be different. We loved these brother Scouts as much as those in America. Throughout the Jamboree encampment covering many square miles, was an attitude of friendliness and good will, no thought of enmity, everyone showing their paramount thought of creating world peace for the future.

"The real benefits from this Jamboree are being manifested as time goes on. I am corresponding with eight Scouts I met at the Jamboree who live in the following countries—Estonia, Luxembourg, England, Australia.

Three Burned To Death In Whiskey Truck Blaze

Philadelphia, May 16.—Three persons were burned to death today when a 10-ton truck, loaded with hundreds of gallons of bonded whiskey, crashed into a parked automobile, knocked down a telephone pole and burst into flames.

Trapped in the cab of the truck, the victims were burned beyond recognition in the blazing inferno, which spread to the Richmond Presbyterian Church, nearby.

After battling the flames for more than an hour, firemen succeeded in recovering the charred bodies. Efforts to identify two of them were unsuccessful, but the driver, tentatively identified as Roy Perkins, 26, of this city, whose wife is in a Philadelphia hospital awaiting the arrival of a baby.

Attendants at the transportation company told detectives Perkins was unaccompanied when he left with the truck. Where the other persons came from no one knows.

Witnesses said the truck burst into flames as it bounded off a parked automobile and struck a metal pole, bending it to the ground. Continuing, the truck struck the curb and overturned. Pouring from broken barrels, the highly inflammable whiskey surrounded the victims in a solid wall of fire.

HIGH SCHOOL BUNNIES TIE FOR LEAGUE HONORS

Bristol Clubbers Win Over
Falls Township By The
Score of 27 to 1

GALLAGHER ON MOUND

FALLS TOWNSHIP, May 16.—The Bristol High School clubbers enjoyed a field day at the expense of the offerings of Walt Anderson and George Roberts, Falls twirlers, and lambasted 23 hits to gain a 27-1 decision here yesterday.

It was the Bunnies' eighth win in the Lower Bucks County League in ten starts and assures them of at least a tie for the championship of the circuit. Newtown High which has but one game to play may tie the Cardinal and Gray by winning their one remaining game with Morrisville.

Yesterday's ball game was a pitiful one for the spectators. Starting off by counting seven tallies in the first, and finishing up with an even half dozen runs in the final round the Bunnies slugged the Falls tossers to all corners of the field.

The Bunnies counted at least one run in each frame, their big inning being the initial stanza when they sank seven tallies. Ten errors behind the Orange and Black pitchers aided the visitors no little and the nine walks issued by the home flingers were also detrimental to the Falls cause.

Although they suffered such a terrific beating the Fallsington nine did stop the consecutive scoreless frame pitching of the local pitchers. After going thirty-three and one-third innings without being scored upon two hits in the final frame drove one tally across and the Bunnies' record was shattered.

Billie Gallagher won his sixth game in seven starts as he set down the home Farmers with but seven bingles. Al Smith and Frank Capileo were the leading hitters for the homesters with two bingles apiece.

Glancing over at the Bristol hit column we find Billie Gallagher leading

HONEYSUCKLE BEING TAKEN FROM HERE TO OTHER PARTS OF PA.

Vines Being Uprooted By The Thousands To Be Transplanted

TO HALT SOIL EROSION

Will Be Planted Along Banks
And Fills of Highway
System

Bucks County, together with other counties of Southeastern Pennsylvania, is aiding a great highway project—that of soil erosion prevention along highways throughout the state.

The gift made by Bucks County to aid in this work is that of hundreds of thousands of honeysuckle vines.

Under leadership of the Pennsylvania Department of Highways, WPA workers are now busily engaged in digging up such vines, roots and all, wherever such can be secured. The plants are being stacked, then taken by truck to other parts of the state where they will be planted along banks and fills, thus aiding in prevention of soil erosion, which is such a detriment to the highway system.

Four gangs of WPA workers are engaged in the project in Bucks County. One group is at present located in Bensalem Township, one in Langhorne, another in Morrisville, and one at Tullytown.

The groups average 30 or more workers, each of whom puts in seven hours per day. The honeysuckle is being dug from banks or fields, wherever such can be readily spared, and wherever consent of the owners of the property is given.

The hundreds of thousands of plants thus secured from four of Pennsylvania's counties, are expected to aid greatly in the prevention of erosion along many miles of the highways in this state.

The men so engaged in lower Bucks County operate out of Bristol. They have been on this particular project for nearly one week.

As the honeysuckle vines are uprooted, the weeds are placed in mounds for burning.

WHAT MEN ADMIRE IN WOMEN

College boys, who usually are bored to tears by questionnaires, responded in droves to a question sheet put out lately by the magazine, Vogue. That the queries had to do with masculine preferences in girls is thought to have had something to do with the volume of returns.

At one point, the voting undergrads were asked to appraise the feminine qualities—neatness, vitality, sex appeal, beauty, distinction, sweetness and style. Very interesting is the final rating, which put vitality far in the lead, and placed the rest as follows: Sex appeal, neatness, distinction, style, beauty and sweetness.

Applying these attributes to familiar figures in the films, we would arrive at some such order as this: 1, Lupe Velez; 2, Mae West; 3, Madge Evans; 4, Garbo; 5, Kay Francis; 6, Marlene Dietrich; and 7, Janet Gaynor. And yet, studying this arrangement, there is a sense of something amiss. Certainly, vitality, as represented by Miss Velez, can not stand alone. There must be a judicious admixture of the other qualities. And in this connection it comes to us that if one luminary in Hollywood embodies the lot in perfect proportion, it must be that gay and dauntless figure, that sweetheart of the millions, that veteran troupier—Shirley Temple.

DIGNIFIED PITCHERS

We congratulate Manager Dresher of the Cincinnati Reds for suspending Pitcher Derringer because he came into the plate standing up when he might have scored the winning run by sliding.

Who are pitchers, anyway, that they think they are too frail or too dignified—or whatever it is—to slide into a base? And why does a pitcher almost invariably have to be about as effective at bat as the oldest woman in the stands?

Why don't pitchers forget their traditional dumbness at the plate and practice hitting, so that occasionally they can win ball games? Sometimes we think they should be excused from batting. Usually when they do bat they are so feeble they spoil the show, and that isn't good business from the point of view of the spectator.

HOOB HARRY

The Hoboes of America in national convention assembled unanimously made a bum of high-minded Harry Hopkins, who heads the "non-political" WPA.

They need not have bothered. Mr. Farley, the Democratic senators and assorted politicians in at least a dozen states already had attended to that, and there was nothing honorary about it when they, as the saying goes, made a bum of Harry.

It might be added that Mr. Farley et al have come perilously close to visiting the same accolade on the President of the United States, who at the outset of the WPA program gave "direct orders" that "politics, so far as we are concerned, is out."

A pair of portals on a new Department edifice in Washington are to be 15½ feet high. Thus the job-hunter, shown the door, can hardly miss it.

In the day of Solomon and his 700 wives, editors received fewer letters, pro and con, on "Shall married women hold positions?"

Gov. Earle's 6-Cent Gas Tax Looms Like a Chinese Wall

ABOUT the year 300 B. C. the Chinese began building the famous Great Wall, to keep alien peoples out. If the Great Wall could be stretched along the boundaries of Pennsylvania it would just about fence in the state.

This is an interesting coincidence, for Governor Earle is planning a modern Great Wall around Pennsylvania. But his plan will work better, and is probably not much more expensive than the Great Wall was. He wants the legislature to raise the state's gasoline taxes to 6c per gallon—5c for the state and 1c for the federal treasury. Pennsylvania motorists now pay gasoline taxes of about $56,000,000 a year; the Governor's increase would bring them up to more than $66,000,000. It would give Pennsylvania the highest gasoline tax of any state east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio and Potomac.

Yes, it would keep outsiders out. Trade and travel follow the lines of cheapest transportation; and if Pennsylvania wants to drive trade away from the state, higher gasoline taxes will do the trick. Apparently a good many Pennsylvanians don't fancy that particular trick, for they are swamping the legislators with objections to higher gas taxes and demands for lower ones.

"BLIND TO LOVE" by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

SYNOPSIS

Mary Shannon had been pampered all her life. She would have gone on that way had not the sight of her father's worn collar awakened Mary to her selfishness with the result that she left college and obtained work in the San Francisco office of the A. A. Heeley Steamship Company. Mary is in love with the socially prominent James ("Jamie") Todd, Jr. Although he never said he loved her, he implied that some day they would marry. Mary's superior, Stephen Bennet, notifies her that he is to be transferred to Seattle as manager of the home office. He wants Mary to go along as his secretary but she cannot bear the thought of leaving her family. That night, Aunt Willie summons Mary with the news of "Jamie's" engagement to Neta Grainger.

CHAPTER IV

"In my day a young feller didn't call on one girl every two or three weeks, whenever he happened to be in her city, and then he engaged to another," Pa was saying heavily. "A decent young feller—" "Things are different now, Henry. Personally I'm just as glad, Mary, dear, I was never the kind to want to marry off my child. As long as I live you'll always have a good home, and—" "Well, I should hope she would always be welcome in her own father's home," Pa said. "The way young fellers are now, a girl's better off if she never marries. You've got a good home, everything you want—" "That's just what I say! We're all so happy here together, all of us. Tootsie, too, heh, heh, heh! I really felt very blue when I thought Mary was going to leave us. Personally I believe in marrying later in life. And we've always been such pals, and all—" "I can call up Jean Harvey, Mary thought. She may know something. Whatever it is, it's better to know. I'll go crazy if they keep on talking. I'll get like Aunt Willie—queer! If I thought I'd have to spend the rest of my life here I'd just jump off the ferry some dark night and be carried out in the tide, and be drowned. Or, I might even take Bennet's offer and go to the Seattle office—" "I might leave you at that. I was just going to tell you when you all started in on me, that Bennet's transferred to Seattle—that's the main office, you see, because all our freight, nearly, comes from up that way—" "From Seattle? Well, for goodness sake! I should think that San Francisco, being so much bigger in population, and in every way—" "Lumber, Aunt Willie. The lumber—it grows in the woods—trees! In Oregon and Washington!" "I know. But San Francisco, being so much bigger in population, it don't seem right that it should have to be second to Seattle—" Mary groaned. "Oh, all RIGHT. Bennet's been demoted then, if you like it better. Anyway I have the chance to go with him!" Now they were surprised. Now they stopped pitying her. Ma said: "WITH HIM! Why—why should he expect you to leave your home, and . . . besides, why should he? It sounds very funny to me. I never heard of such a thing. Babe, why should—" "When the manager is changed the office force doesn't change. That's the universal rule," Pa said. "Sh! I'm talking, Henry. I don't understand, Babe—" "Do you HAVE to understand every single thing that happens to me? Bennet's promoted, and they said he could bring his assistant—I'm really his assistant here, since they let the other man go—and they wanted to send the Seattle man and his assistant down here—" "H-mm . . . they may squeeze you out, then. Well, don't worry, Babe, you won't be in the bread line if you do. You've got a good home while your Pa can still take care of you—"

"I know. I didn't say I'd go to Seattle. I didn't say I wouldn't, either. Now, don't all FOLLOW me! Can't I take a step without everybody on my heels? I'm going to the front hall, to use the TELEPHONE, to telephone to a GIRL!" Pa lit his pipe.

Ma began to stack the dinner dishes. Only Aunt Willie was hurt, and she would get over it in a minute. The child was tired—hardly knew what she was doing. "Piedmont 6333."

"They heard her call the Piedmont number. The Harvey's number. Pa turned his good ear. "Sh! Ma warned. "Hello, Jean?"

They heard Mary's voice, clear and high and gay.

Dora Shannon compressed her lips, nodded meaningfully at her husband. He said: "What did I tell you? She didn't give a hoot for him." Ma said, "Sh—"

Mary's voice again. "Oh nothing. That's fine. . . . Fine! How's yours? . . . I know. We did intend getting over to the dance, but when you're out of college and in business, things come up. . . . Oh, how IS Jamie? . . . No, I never see him any more. When you're out of college and in business—what? No, they didn't—or if they did, we weren't home then. . . .

"Heavens, Jean it's nothing to me. Why SHOULD you feel funny about it? Of course, I've always liked Jamie, and I certainly hope they'll be happy. . . . No, I don't believe he ever did happen to show it to me, though I may have forgotten, he showed me so many of his girls' pictures. . . . Of course he did! . . .

"Jamie Todd? He had MILLIONS of girls. . . . Well, of course for a little while I DID like him, but . . . No, I don't know who the girls were. I'm not interested in Jamie Todd's girls. . . . She's NOT pretty? She ISN'T? Then why do you suppose. . . . Jean, you always did have an evil mind! Well, it's nothing to me. I hope he's happy, that's all. . . . yes, see you soon."

Mary hung up the telephone. She was shaking all over. The telephone, the old-fashioned wall kind, was right next to the front door. She opened the door, and the cool night wind, soft with the fragrance of wet leaves, sprouting green things, assailed her. Perhaps she wouldn't be ill after all.

"What did Jean say?" Ma called down the hall from the kitchen. Mary shut the front door, turned to the three who now stood in the kitchen door, Ma first, holding a dish-cloth, Aunt Willie peeling an orange, Pa and his newspaper just behind.

"She says this Miss Vesta Grainger, or whatever her name is, was down here last week. He seems to have taken her everywhere but here. Nobody likes her. She's kind of funny looking," Jean says. Jean says she can't understand why he's marrying her. I told her it was nothing to me—and it isn't—and now I'm going to bed—to catch up my beauty sleep."

"There's some hot water, Babe. I can heat more for your bath in just a few minutes—" "No, thanks. Tired. No bath. I'm going to sleep!"

So she was alone, when she'd closed the bedroom door behind her. Alone to sleep—or cry, quietly, so they couldn't hear her through the door.

It was good to get her clothes off—to slip into a nightie, and crawl into bed, in the incurious dark, away from prying eyes.

She tried to go over it, fairly—as if it were someone else, not herself. Had she had the right to think he cared? Or was she just goopy, imagining things that had never been?

Way back in her childhood she seemed to remember Aunt Willie, who had been pretty then, in a plump, dark way, carrying on about someone who got married. And Ma telling Pa—"Why, he just took her out once, and came here once. How can she THINK he had serious intentions?"

Maybe she was just another Aunt Willie, imagining that because a boy says a few things, and kisses you a few times . . .

But they WERE good friends. Couldn't she have been told, even if he didn't love her, and never had? Why must she be the last one to know—to have to get it from an old newspaper, when Jean Harvey knew, and everyone else, and probably everybody saying, "Poor Mary—"

She didn't cry. She wouldn't cry. But tears squeezed out from under her lids.

She, who had such ideas about careers, and never marrying unless you could better yourself, and keep 'em guessing, and don't let them know you care, until you are sure they do. . . .

Well, he had cared. He cared—at least enough to single her out from the others, the very first time he saw her. . . .

It was in summer, two years ago. A picnic at Sausalito. Jean invited her, the last minute, because somebody else couldn't go. If she'd had any pride then, she wouldn't have gone, and then she'd never have known him. . . .

They were having breakfast. Ma was still at the stove, making back-wheat cakes. It was a Sunday morning. It was the first time Jean ever asked her anywhere, though they kept up the friendship, with sort of stiff family calls, after the Harvey's made that money in stocks and moved to Piedmont. That was more than some girls would have done. You couldn't blame Jean.

Ma had been a little uppity about it, though. The usual family confab before she got off. She had worn the pink linen dress that she always liked better than any dress she ever had, and it was still damp around the armpits and neck, because Ma ironed it while she was dressing.

She tied a narrow pink ribbon around her head, with the little bow on the top, and her hair, that had been shampooed the day before, curled around it, in little feathery ringlets in the wind.

So that she felt pretty, and sure of herself, right from the start. Jean had been pretty decent, too. Not patronizing the way she used to be sometimes. The others were all nice enough, too, but after she saw Jamie she hardly saw the others.

She always thought of him as he was that first day, with his white shirt open at the neck, and the sun in his light hair, and his dark, sun-burnt skin.

He didn't talk very much. She didn't, either. They just sort of gravitated together.

They'd taken a boat and rowed to a cove. She could remember that the tide had been heavy, that the salt spray stung their sun-warmed faces and necks.

She had flirted, rather outrageously. Because she wanted to show Jean that she could hold her own with the Piedmont crowd. She didn't know then that he wasn't part of it, either. He was a plum they were reaching for. His folks had enormous ranches up around Sacramento. All the girls were after him. . . .

She had been willing enough to say goodbye after that first day. She'd never expected to see him again. He was just something nice that happened, and would be gone forever. Even when he kissed her goodbye that night when he brought her home, she hadn't expected to see him again.

But he'd come back, and come back, all that summer. . . . He must have loved her then! He couldn't have said the things he did, kissed her the way he did, if he hadn't cared.
